Hey Kids,

It's winter, my favorite season! I hope you all are enjoying the cooler temperatures like I am. Last time I asked you to send me some new pictures for my fridge telling me what you would do if you had $50 to share. I received so many great pictures and answers, from sharing it with the less fortunate to buying Christmas gifts and food. I just wish I had more room on my fridge to display all of them!

I am still answering your questions about money. I'm going to answer another one about where money goes when you deposit it. Check out the answer on the back!

Your Friend,

Pee Wee

YOUR MONEY QUESTIONS

Awhile back, I asked you what you'd like to know about money matters and you sent in some great questions. I answered a few but there are more I'd love to answer for you! This one comes from Skyler at Pine Tree Federal Credit Union.

Q: Where does the money go?

You may wonder where your money goes when you give it to a teller at your credit union. Are they keeping it in a back room with your name on it? Do they put it in a safe? Are they sending it somewhere?

A: When you deposit cash, the physical cash might stay in the teller's drawer or may go to the credit union's cash reserves, which is a certain amount of cash they keep on hand to meet withdrawal requests. The value of the cash you deposit is recorded in your account as a "credit" which means the credit union owes you that money. They can then use that money to make loans to other members.
